Organizations today are compelled to provide new services in order to compete. Be it regulations, such as PSD2 or simply commercialization and leveraging of existing services, which are internal to the organization.

One way to go about it is to develop solutions in house. However, as with any other service or product, it takes time to get right.

The other way is to leverage tried and tested products and techniques, which will provide the right image and a good performance and quality OOTB.

Success stories such as in a certain bank, without being compelled by regulation, allowed to open highly sensitive transactions to 3rd parties, improved its security posture and provided an excellent service to customers.

The agility of quickly adding new services keeps the organization competitive, secured without interrupting customer services.
